Case Study, Photography and Video collection

PRACTICAL ACTION

| Details of staff member collecting these case studies | |
|---|---|
| Full name: | Elizabeth Dunn |
| Job title: | Engagement Officer |
| I have explained to all those featured in these CASE STUDIES, IMAGES & VIDEO how they will be used and they have given their permission. please sign and date to confirm | Signed: Elizabeth DunnDate consent obtained: 25 - 26 April 2018 |

Please sign above to confirm that the following information has been given verbally to and understood by these subjects of case studies, images and video (please list names).

| | |
|---|---|
| Tabetha Kabia | |
| Mary Waiyego | |
| | |
| | |
| | |

Informed consent is about ensuring every individual understands what their image and words will be used for. The subject should feel they are able to refuse their use without pressure. We need to be aware of our position of power as gatekeepers to our work which may have benefits for them. We need to ensure that the information we collect is a true reflection of the subject's views and that images are an accurate representation of the issues we are addressing.

1. Explain why you are speaking to the interviewee and where their stories, images and video are likely to be used. If you are using a recording device, explain why.
2. Ask if it is okay to take the subject's pictures/video and to publish those pictures/videos. Be aware that subjects of photos don't always understand what this means or the impact of consent. So use an example they can relate to such as 'would it be okay if your family or friends this photo in a leaflet or poster?'
3. Ask if they have any questions and let them know and they do not have to answer any questions they do not want to and they can retract their consent if they wish.
4. Any data that includes children requires the consent of a parent or guardian
5. If there is any sensitive information (medical, sexual preferences, religious beliefs, ethnicity) the interviewer should ensure that the subject is aware of this during the interviews and confirm that they are happy for us to include it.